“Metal” Benefit Plans, Coverage Levels

Metal Level is a measure of plan’s relative value

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Platinum</td>
<td>90%</td>

</tbody>
</table>

- Metal Level is NOT a measure of what a plan will actually pay for a single individual.
- Theory: Metal Level uses “Actuarial Value” (AV) as applied to a Standard Population.

  E.g., if 100,000 random people all bought the same Silver Plan, the insurer would pay about 70% of the total cost of the claims.

- Practice: Issuers use an “Actuarial Value Calculator” to determine plan Metal Level.

  – Tobacco use (rates may be higher for tobacco users)
• Family Composition. Rates for families will be the sum of the rate for each person to be covered.
  – The number of rated children (ages 0-20 and not including spouse) is capped at 3.
• Employee contribution options
  – Member level
  – Average rate (broken)
